HIGHLIGHTS

25X

I. The Military Situation in South Vietnam:
Heavy contact has been reported between two CIDG companies and an enemy force near War Zone "C" in Tay Ninh Province (Para. 1). The largest allied operation of the war--Operation ATTLEBORO--ended on 25 November (Para. 2). A five-hour battle on 24 November in coastal Binh Dinh Province resulted in 30 Communist soldiers killed (Para. 3). Twenty-three enemy troops were reported killed in a three-hour engagement between US Marines and Communist troops northwest of Quang Ngai city (Para. 4). Latest results of the Viet Cong ambush of a convoy near Da Lat on 24 November are reported as nine allied killed and 11 wounded (Paras. 5-6). The Viet Cong kidnapped over 100 persons from a New Life hamlet in the Mekong Delta near where a similar incident occurred several weeks ago (Para. 7). Weekly review of South Vietnam battle statistics (Para. 8).

II. Political Developments in South Vietnam: The issue of military pressures for certain ambassadorial appointments continues to cause concern (Para. 1). Constituent Assembly chairman Phan Khac Suu believes that government leaders are willing to give up their veto power over the draft constitution and also to prolong the life of the assembly, but US Embassy officers are more skeptical (Para. 2).

VI. Other Major Aspects: There are increasing indications that Cambodia has been taking steps to limit Viet Cong use of Cambodian territory as a sanctuary (Paras. 1-7).

I. THE MILITARY SITUATION IN SOUTH VIETNAM

1. Two South Vietnamese Civilian Irregular Defense Group (CIDG) companies have been reported in heavy contact with an enemy force near Communist War Zone "C" in central Tay Ninh Province. The battle area is in deep jungle some ten miles northeast of Tay Ninh city. US artillery and tactical air strikes have been supporting the irregulars and US troops are preparing to send reinforcements into the fight. Only light casualties have been reported thus far in the action.

US Operations

2. Operation ATTLEBORO in Tay Ninh Province, which at one time included 17 US and two South Vietnamese battalions and was the largest allied sweep of the war, ended on 25 November. Total casualties for this six-week-long operation are 111 Americans killed and 416 wounded compared to 1,089 Viet Cong killed and 44 captured. Enemy losses included large amounts of foodstuffs, arms and ammunition; many enemy base camps were also destroyed. A total of 176 B-52 strikes and 1,560 tactical air strikes supported this operation. (See Section VI for Cambodian reaction to Operation ATTLEBORO.)

3. Two companies of the US 1st Air Cavalry Division participating in Operation THAYER II reported killing 30 Communist soldiers during a five-hour battle on 24 November in the rugged coastal area of Binh Dinh Province approximately 46 miles north-northeast of Qui Nhon. American casualties in this action were nine killed and 21 wounded. Two US reconnaissance helicopters were shot down by enemy ground fire. A total of 378 enemy troops have been killed since this four-battalion search-and-destroy operation began on 24 October.

4. The US Marine battalion conducting Operation RIO BLANCO in coastal Quang Ngai Province established contact with an estimated 100 Viet Cong early on 25 November about 17 miles northwest of Quang Ngai city. In a three-hour engagement, two Americans were killed and 23 wounded compared to 23 enemy soldiers killed and five captured.

Da Lat Ambush

5. The latest report of casualties resulting from the ambush of a ten-truck US civilian/military convoy six miles southeast of Da Lat in Tuyen Duc Province on 24 November shows nine killed (one US military, one US civilian, and seven foreign national civilians). Eleven others were reported wounded (six US military, one US civilian, and four foreign nationals.)

6. The daily convoy, which transports civilian technicians to a communications site under construction near Da Lat, was traveling along Route 11 which is normally free from Viet Cong harassment. Three vehicles were destroyed and five damaged. A reaction force dispatched from Da Lat hit a mine and also received small arms fire, but forced the enemy to withdraw. The reaction force sustained no casualties; Viet Cong casualties are not known.

7. A Viet Cong force of unknown size entered the Din Cu New Life hamlet 24 miles southeast of Phu Vinh in the Mekong Delta province of Vinh Binh on 24 November. The guerrillas burned 15 houses and kidnaped 109 civilians. The captives were reported to be refugees from a nearby Viet Cong-controlled area. The village had a total population of nearly 500. A South Vietnamese Regional Force company has been dispatched to the village, but there have been no reports of contact with the enemy. This village is in the same area where the Viet Cong captured 107 civilians from another village several weeks ago.

II. POLITICAL DEVELOPMENTS IN SOUTH VIETNAM

1. Foreign Minister Tran Van Do has told US Embassy officials that he had a long talk with Premier Ky about military pressures on the Foreign Ministry. Do is uncertain if his arguments against such pressures were successful since several ambassadorial changes are still scheduled against Do's wishes. Bui Diem, one of Ky's close advisers, will probably be assigned as ambassador either to the United States or to Japan. Dinh Trinh Chinh, another adviser, is slated to become ambassador to Thailand. Generals Do Cao Tri and Tran Van Minh are slated for Tunisia and Senegal, respectively. There is also pressure to replace the current ambassador to Laos, but Do is still objecting, and this appointment is not yet settled.

2. Constituent Assembly chairman Phan Khac Suu believes that government leaders are willing to give up their present strong power to amend the assembly's version of the constitution, and to agree to prolong the life of the assembly after the promulgation of the constitution. Suu and 11 other assembly delegates met with Premier Ky and Chief of State Thieu to discuss these issues on 18 November. A formal government answer is expected, perhaps next week. US Embassy officers, however, feel that it is unlikely that the government will agree to all the changes that the assembly has requested.

VI. OTHER MAJOR ASPECTS

1. There are increasing indications that Phnom Penh has been taking some steps to limit Viet Cong use of Cambodian territory for sanctuary during the course of Operation ATTLEBORO in Tay Ninh Province.

25X

5. One reflection of the Cambodian attitude, however, has been provided by a Cambodian soldier who was captured in Tay Ninh Province, a few miles from the border, on 19 November. He told US interrogators that he was part of a three-man team sent across the border to warn the Viet Cong that they would be fired on if they attempted to cross into Cambodia. He said that this policy has been in effect since mid-October.

25X1

He also said that it was a common occurrence for small numbers of Viet Cong to take refuge in Cambodia during allied ground sweeps or air attacks along the border. He claimed that Cambodian troops engaged the Communists when they were encountered, but he doubted that more extensive measures would be taken to control the border since the Viet Cong re-entered South Vietnam when the danger was past.

Border Incident on 22 November

7. Phnom Penh has issued a strong protest over an alleged South Vietnamese mortar attack against a Cambodian border post opposite Kien Tuong - Kien Phong provinces on 22 November. Cambodia claims that it lost five killed and five wounded in the "unprovoked" attack, and brought an International Control Commission team to the scene to inspect the damage. Sihanouk has at various times characterized these border incidents as "inevitable" by-products of the South Vietnam war, but, in more belligerent moments, he has ordered Cambodian reprisals.
